The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR
Executive Secretary
Agricultural Council of California

Of vital importance to California's dairy and livestock industries was the action taken by the State Legislature, during the closing hours of the session, appropriating $500,000 for the establishment of a college of veterinary medicine at the University of California.

Despite the fact that California ranks as the foremost agricultural state in the nation, with a tremendous investment in farm animals, this state has had no college for the training of veterinarians and California students, desirous of studying veterinary medicine, have been compelled to go to other states for training.

Research work of first importance in controlling animal diseases will be made possible, as well as training for veterinary students, if Governor Olson signs the bill, and the new College should pay for itself many times over. Farmers in many sections of the state have complained in recent years of a shortage of competent, well-trained veterinarians, and the new college, if established, will provide an opportunity for many California youths to train for a profession which isn't overcrowded and which is essential to the welfare of the farming industry.

The final days of the 1941 legislative session brought on scores of other bills either directly or indirectly affecting agriculture. The much-disputed $100,000 annual appropriation for the San Francisco Cow Palace finally passed, climaxing a 10-year campaign for funds to bring a national livestock show to the bay area each year and provide special shows of purebred stock throughout the year for western breeders. This bill is now on Governor Olson's desk, awaiting his action.

While the big Livestock Pavilion, or so-called Cow Palace, has had a stormy history, President George Keyston of Agricultural District 1A, which operates the Pavilion, declared that the building will be completed in 90 days and that the first national livestock show will be held November 15 to 22 of this year. "This means," said Mr. Keyston, in commenting on the $100,000 appropriation, "that the annual National Livestock Show in the Cow Palace will be on the same basis as the Los Angeles County Fair at Pomona, the National Citrus Show at San Bernardino and the California State Fair in Sacramento. This will bring the best herds from the middle east and east to California and give our breeders an opportunity to improve their own herds as well as an opportunity to show."

Earlier in the legislative session the law requiring one day of rest in seven was amended to provide for necessary exceptions in farm work and other industries where strict enforcement of the old law made it impossible to cope with emergency conditions. And shortly before adjournment, final approval was given to a national defense measure permitting workers on the highways and other public projects to work more than eight hours a day during the period of the emergency. Heretofore, workers on such public projects have been limited to an eight hour day regardless of contingencies.

During the closing hours of the session, the Legislature also took action to clear up a disagreement between the federal and state governments over the administration of California's Old Age Pension Act. The new bill, bringing the state pension act into conformity with demands of the federal social security board, repeals present sections of the law which permit old age pensioners to earn certain forms of outside income up to $15 monthly, without deduction from their $40 maximum monthly payments. The federal board objected to this practice and served notice that California would risk losing the $38,000,000 which the national government contributes annually unless the law was amended.

Wilder Immel reports that the county jail library has need for magazines of "good quality" and for late fiction and other works. He reports a special request for "High School, Self-Taught," and other similar text books. Any contributions may be left with him at the Electric Shoe Shop.

BRITISH SINK NAZI SEA RAIDER

Russians Report Germans Blocked From Ukraine, Admit Gains In Baltic

By UNITED PRESS

Soviet Russia battled to break off twin Nazi drives into the north flank of the long eastern front today and reported that the Red army had repulsed German forces battering at the door to the Ukraine on the south.

Fighting continued on a scale probably greater than any similar military operations of the past, with the German blitzkrieg forces admittedly pushing into the Baltic states and the former Polish territory as far as the Baranovichi area only 70 miles from Minsk, but not yet able to assault the main Red army defense lines on the pre-war border.

A promised Nazi statement of sensational gains failed to materialize in the regular daily communiqué of the German high command, which again dealt in generalities and predicted important successes as a result of German triumphs in border clashes.

The Nazi high command reported the loss of another raiding warship, the auxiliary cruiser Pinguin in a battle with the 10,000-ton British cruiser Cornwall. It said that the Pinguin and the pocket battleship Admiral Scherr had sunk 352,000 tons of enemy shipping in the Atlantic and Indian oceans. The Admiral Scherr returned to a German port.

The Germans reported that between June 13 and 25, 136 British airplanes had been shot down compared to 35 Nazi planes lost. London said that the growing Royal Air Force offensive against Germany had resulted in destruction of nine more Nazi craft, bringing the total to 150 in daylight sweeps since June 11. Forty-six British planes were reported lost in the same period.

Softball Hitter Averages Told

Individual Leaders In Girls And A Divisions Clouting .727 Average

Scorekeeper A. W. Wilson, of the softball league, has released a new batch of statistics on league play which are based on performance "up to June 23."

In the batting and fielding by clubs there are some unusual features. In the women's division, batting, Caldor Girls are hitting .444; Legionettes .365; Plymouth .294 and the Lutz Motorettes .235.

In fielding, the clubs rate in the same order. Caldor Girls .882; Legionettes .879; Plymouth Girls .714; and Lutz Motorettes .664.

In the A division the Lumberjacks are hitting .293 to lead the pack, but they are fielding .835, second from the bottom. California Door is only hitting .197 (at the bottom of the pack), but is fielding .938 to lead the division.

Mosquito CCC is second in hitting with .238 and third in fielding with .872, while the Placerville Motor Parts are third in hitting with .220 and second in fielding with .907.

Mac's Jumbos don't field any better than they hit. They have a balanced performance, being fourth in hitting with .211 and fourth in fielding with .66.

Snowline CCC is hitting .206, in fifth place, and fielding for a .781 average in sixth place.

In the B division, Pacific Servicetops in hitting at .367 and in the caboose on the fielding train with an .806. The Camino 49ers, on the other hand, have the observation platform when it comes to hitting, with a .283 average, but they are right on the engine pilot in fielding, with .912.

DAMAGES ARE CLAIMED FOR ALLEGED MALICIOUS PROSECUTION

A suit was on file Thursday morning in Superior Court in behalf of Jack Battles and against Homer Madden, claiming damages for alleged malicious prosecution.

The complaint recites that the plaintiff was charged on September 10, 1940 in the Justice Court of Placerville township with drunken driving and charges that the defendant brought the charge maliciously.

Battles subsequently was acquitted of the charge. The complaint alleges he was put to costs of $77.50 to defend himself and that he lost his job and his good name was injured by publicity attendant upon the proceedings. Wherefore plaintiff prays an award of $77.50 reimbursing him for expenses claimed incident to the action, and damages of $5,000.

MACHINISTS TO END STRIKE AT BAY

800 AFL Unionists Will Return To Jobs Monday; Lumber Truce Sought

By UNITED PRESS

Eight hundred AFL machinists abandoned strike demands today and promised to resume work Monday at San Francisco Bay shipyards.

The strikers voted more than 5 to 1 last night to end the last major strike crippling national defense production. Three hundred CIO machinists will decide tonight whether they should join the AFL unionists.

Return of the AFL members will affect more than two-thirds of the $500,000,000 in defense contracts held by the bay area companies. The AFL machinists had struck at five plants and the CIO workers at six.

The AFL vote accepted the Pacific Coast master labor agreement providing an hourly wage of $1.12 and time and a half for overtime. The machinists had demanded $1.15 and double time for overtime.

Only the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company, operator of the two largest plants at San Francisco, had rejected the master agreement. Bethlehem agreed Monday to accept the contract and paved the way for the strike settlement.

There originally were 1,700 strikers at the 11 plants, but 600 found employment at other shops offering the wage scale they demanded. National AFL leaders denounced the strike, except at Bethlehem, as a violation of the master agreement, but the machinists insisted they were not parties to the pact.

James Barkley Is Summoned

Retired Fairplay Rancher Called By Death At Home In Placerville

James Barkley, 86, retired rancher of the Fairplay district and an El Dorado County resident nearly seventy years, passed away early Thursday morning at his home on Myrtle Avenue.

The funeral services will be Saturday at 2 o'clock from Memory Chapel under the auspices of El Dorado Lodge No. 26, F. & A. M. Burial will be at Union Cemetery.

Mr. Barkley had been ill at his home for several weeks past but his condition during the past week had been such that he was able to leave his bed and join the family at the table. His spirits earlier Wednesday evening are reported as having been excellent and there was no indication that his condition might suddenly, as it did, take a critical turn during the night.

Mr. Barkley was born in April of 1855 in Lower Stewiacke, Colchester County, Nova Scotia. He came west alone as a young man, reaching San Francisco in 1872. In his early residence in California he was located first in San Joaquin County, moving soon afterward to the Fairplay district, where he devoted his life to ranching and stock-raising from which he retired twenty-one years ago, then moving to Placerville.

He was married fifty-nine years ago on November 20, next, to Mary Frances Billick, of Fairplay, who survives him. The couple wed in Placerville before the Rev. Father (Continued on Page Four)

Mr. and Mrs. Hal Morton and Mr. and Mrs. James Morton were hosts on Sunday last at a picnic dinner at Marshall Monument State Park at Coloma, honoring E. B. Morton's seventy-eighth birthday anniversary.

AID-TO-RUSSIA FAILS TO STIR OPPOSITION

Washington Doubts Red Army's Chances, Expects Japs To Menace Siberia

WASHINGTON — (UP) — With a minimum of opposition President Roosevelt today appears to have established firmly this country's foreign policy with respect to the aid-to-Russia principle.

In three quick moves, the administration announced its sympathy for the Red army's effort to stop Adolph Hitler, its intention to give such material aid as possible, and its decision against invoking the Neutrality Act in the Russo-German war.

So far, there has been no more than scattered congressional opposition, although the Neutrality Act decision was an invitation to legislative opponents of Roosevelt's foreign policies to make a voting issue of the whole question.

Several senators urged that this country continue to concentrate on providing material aid to Britain.

The Neutrality Act provides that either congress or the president may invoke its provisions when either finds that a state of war exists between foreign states and such action is "necessary to promote the security and preserve the peace of the United States or to protect the lives of citizens of the United States."

Failure to invoke the act will facilitate deliveries of munitions, if any actually are sent. American ships could not carry munitions if the act became operative. So far, there has been no Russian request for supplies. Deliveries will depend on the Soviet Union's ability to withstand the initial shock of German invasion and also on the availability of shipping.

Wheeler Notes War Of "Isms"

Europe Facing Communist Or Nazi Domination, Montana Solon Declares

HARTFORD, Conn. (UP) — Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, D., Mont., said at an America First Committee rally last night that Europe faces the alternative of communistic or Nazi domination if either side wins a quick victory in the Russo-German war.

"Do you Americans want to send American money or American boys to fight side by side with Joe Stalin in order to establish communism throughout Europe and the world?" he said.

"Thinking people know that no nation or combination of nations can invade the United States, unless indeed we have given our guns, our planes, our warships to some foreign power."

"Some of us have repeated day after day for more than two years that which recent events have made obvious," he said. "The present war is not a holy war. It is not a war to make the world safe for democracy. It is not an American war. Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy battle imperialistic Britain and communistic Russia. It is not a war against aggressors — not a war against dictators."

CHAPTER XXXIII

WHEN Julie had been led under arrest, out of the Poll Parrot, she had gone gallantly, her head up. What happened to her didn't matter, so long as she had helped Barry to win an opportunity on the radio. She had succeeded! She had left him talking to the radio scout. Now she was willing to pay whatever penalty the law demanded for what she had done to Madame Gullebra.

As she and the policeman emerged onto the street, she saw a police cruiser waiting with another officer at the wheel. The man who had arrested her hustled her into the car and climbed in beside her.

They pulled away from the curb. Julie squeezed between the two men, leaned back and relaxed, a little smile on her lips.

One of the officers looked at her curiously.

"You look like you're enjoying this," he remarked.

"I am."

"What's it all about?" he asked.

"That was the idea of tying that woman up, stealing her costume and going out to play the piano in her place?"

"Because she plays the piano atrociously."

"That may seem like a good reason to you, lady. But it's going to sound awful thin when you tell it to the judge. There's lots of folks that don't play the piano very good. That don't give other people the right to knock them down!"

Julie laughed. "I didn't realize how silly that was going to sound. The truth is, Madame Gullebra was ruining Mr. Caldwell's accompaniments intentionally—to make his singing sound bad. I asked her in a very nice way to do better tonight—and I guess I just lost my temper when she refused."

"From the looks of her living room, I guess you did lose your head!"

"How did she get loose?" Julie asked.

"I meant to go back later and free her."

"Luckily, she got free by herself. You evidently didn't let her very tight."

DURING the rest of the trip to the police station, silence prevailed.

The ride didn't seem quite real to Julie. A Hamilton just couldn't be arrested and taken to jail! But here she was, between two burly policemen who were very real indeed!

At last, they drew up in front of a building with two lights burning over the entrance. Julie stared at it in fascination. The windows were all barred!

She shuddered and was suddenly afraid. Her mouth was dry, her knees shaky as she climbed up onto the sidewalk.

A little knot of curious loiterers stared at her as the officers hurried her up the steps of the building. A snicker arose at sight of her bizarre gypsy costume.

The officers took her down a hallway and into a low-ceilinged room which was divided by a railing.

A gray-haired man in uniform was at a desk behind the railing.

"Here's the girl we picked up at the Poll Parrot," one of the policemen said. "Assault and battery on the piano player."

Stewart Says:

Beaverbrook Has Climbed From Nowhere

By CHARLES STEWART
Central Press Columnist

LORD BEAVERBROOK is beginning to be regarded in Washington as the Briton with whom American production management, of war supplies for John Bull's benefit, will be most closely in contact henceforth.

The "Beaver," as they call him, has a new job in Prime Minister Winston Churchill's cabinet. Previously he held the portfolio of aircraft productivity. Inasmuch as Britain, from the first, has clamored for all the planes it could get from our side of the Atlantic, this was an assignment that brought him into very intimate touch with our aviation industry. Now, however, he's taken charge of the British manufacture, and acquisition from us, of every item of military and naval as well as air supplies. In short, according to London dispatches, he virtually is his nation's economic dictator, and, in effect, Winston Churchill's deputy prime minister.

Winston, it appears, is to direct Britain's actual fighting operations, but it will be up to the Beaver to provide army, navy and air corps with the machinery and explosive to fight with. Winston will tell him what's needed and the Beaver's stunt will be to deliver the goods. He'll have to rely on us for a lot of 'em and undoubtedly will holler his head off to us to rush 'em across.

Good at Hollering

He's good at hollering, vociferously and persistently. A newspaper publisher, like Navy Secretary Frank Knox, has much in common with Frank's faculty for making himself heard. And, for strenuousness, he bears a strong resemblance to Fiorello H. LaGuardia, who, besides being mayor of New York, is mixed violently into nearly everything else.

Furthermore the Beaver's an excellent selection to do business with us Yanks because he's a native Canadian and we and the Canucks are so much alike that it's hard to tell some of us apart. That isn't so true of the French Canadians, to be sure, but the Beaver isn't French.

For that matter, Prime Minister Churchill has a strong American strain in his recent ancestry. He's more distinctly English than the Beaver, though, and there's more difference between the English and Yanks than there is between Yanks and Canadians—excepting the French ones.

American footwear production in 1941 probably will exceed 400 million pairs, the Department of Com-

Winston, it's understood, will continue handling John Bull's diplomacy. That isn't to be the Beaver's function. He isn't notable as a diplomat, anyway—too hard boiled; not soft spoken enough. That isn't material. He's chosen to yell like fury for American war supplies; not to appease us. He can yell alright, and that's a tone of voice we understand and don't resent, when it's well meant.

There's some talk to the purport that the Beaver may come over here to discuss his problems with us at short range, but that's a bit doubtful; he's due to be so busy at home.

A Big Headache

Whatever he gets the United States to produce for him will have to be transported to Britain. That'll be a headache for one E. J. Leathers, a comparative unknown even in Britain, it's said. It's related that he's a first rate shipping and transport expert, though. The story is that the Beaver, rather than Winston, picked him to handle the transportation job. We unquestionably will be getting acquainted with him, too. He'll be yowling as loudly for American ships as the Beaver will be yowling for war cargoes to put in 'em.

Originally he was from a nice but inconspicuous, very moderately circumstanced Canadian family. He started in life as a clothing store clerk in Calgary. Then he ran a pool room there. In due course, accumulating some savings, he broke into bigger business, effected a merger of several big cement companies and piled up considerable money. He'd always had an ambition to cop off his British peerage. So, taking his financial wad with him, he journeyed to London, a plain Max Aiken, bought a newspaper, made a howling success of it, and copped off the title he'd been yearning for since he was a kid in school.

Now look at him!—his lordship!—the Beaver!—economic dictator of the British empire!—darned nearly on a par with Prime Minister Winston Churchill!—higher up in the aristocracy than Winston himself. Indeed!—negotiating on an equality with Bill Knudsen and Secretary Hull and President Roosevelt!—on the eve of saving the world from totalitarianism!—if he can—and all that!

Quite a performance for ordinary Max Aiken, eh? Calgary pool

Machinists End Bay Strike

The defense mediation board asked 1,500 members of the International Woodworkers of America—CIO—who are still striking in the Puget Sound region to return to work. ### COLOMAN PRIZES WATCH ONCE OWNED BY MARSHALL

LOTUS—Everett De Lory, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. De Lory, of Coloma, has in his possession a watch and chain once the property of James W. Marshall, who first found gold at Coloma in 1848.

The watch was carried by Mr. Marshall for many years. It was made in London, England, and is of the chain wind type. The chain by which the watch is carried is made of buckskin, braided by Marshall into six strands.

About 1880 when Marshall was under some financial stress, he pawned the watch and chain to Ezra M. Smith, better known as "Cow" Smith, who had a modest collection of coins, relics and minerals. Following Mr. Smith's death, Mrs. Smith disposed of his cabinet to various parties and the watch and chain fell into the hands of C. E. V. Saunders, who carried the watch for some time and, being a great friend of the De Lory family, gave the watch to their son, Everett, who now prizes it very highly.

That the watch and chain once were the property of James W. Marshall is attested by a number of older residents of this vicinity who knew Marshall well and had the watch and chain, known to be Marshall's, in their hands; among them being our friend, Charles A. Rasmussen.

The general opinion here seems to be pessimistic regarding the Russian army's chances, but the Red army could fall back thousands of miles and still have need for American supplies later by way of the Pacific. Those supplies would have to be delivered, however, under the watchful eye of Japan, and there is belief here that Japan will move on Siberia if the Red army falters.

A Stickup? Well, Hardly

SALT LAKE CITY, (AP) — The thug who jumped on the running board of Mrs. Natalia Lewis' car, and ordered her to "move over—this is a stickup," reckoned without her quick temper. "I just smacked him in the face with my fist and gunned the car — and he hit the road with a thud," she told police in reporting the thwarted robbery.
